Mrs. Earl McCann Will Run For School Board

WRITE-IN CANDIDATE

Feeling that a woman's viewpoint should be welcome on the Richmond Elementary School Board and that she has the qualifications to so serve the people of Richmond, Mrs. Earl McCann has this week announced her candidacy as a write-in candidate for the place on the city school board now occupied by Mr. J. O. Ford and who is the only candidate who has filed and whose name will be on the ballot at the election to be held on Saturday (May 2d—next Saturday.

"It was not my purpose to run as a 'write-in' originally at all," said Mrs. McCann, "but when friends of mine called up the school department they claimed that there was such confusion because of the new state laws that no information could be given about the elections. This was perhaps true, concerning the high school election; but there had been no change in the elementary school election date, and I feel I should have been so informed. If my friends are numerous enough to elect me, this is one thing I should like to change so that all citizens may be given full and complete information about the school department always.

"At the school board meeting last Wednesday the board was asked what disposition had been made of the $3,700 allotted for the education of physically-handicapped children. It appears that what money can be used has been used to add to the salaries of teachers who are already employed, when with many teachers out of employment it seems to me that the money can be used to better advantage by employing those who are specially fitted for this work on a full-time basis.

"I realize that a write-in candidate has a very hard time to be elected— nevertheless I will appreciate the efforts of anyone who will write in the name 'Frances L. McCann" on the ballot at the election.

"I have nothing against Mr. Ford, even though some

VETERANS ANNUAL DINNER

Once each year the veterans of Richmond get together to break bread with city and county officials in appreciation of the fact that city and county money was used to build the memorial buildingand decorate the park. Ladies of the auxiliaries put on the banquet which is usually something to write home about. This year was no exception. The annual dinner was held Wednesday evening in Memorial Hall.

Toastmaster of the event was the Hon. George F. Imbach, city councilman and a

GEO. F. IMBACH

Senior Vice Commander of the Veterans of Foreign War in this state. He was introduced by John Mayers, VFW, and explained that the purpose of the banquet was "not to raise money but to show the appreciation of the veterans for benefits received from the supervisors and council."

Guests of Honor this year were Mr. and Mrs. William A. Vickery—only couple in this city who are eligible for all war veteran organizations and a mighty popular couple, too.

Supervisor Long in his usual good address, made the point that "the board and the council ac only as the custodians of the monies of the people" and they were well satisfied with the results of the investment in the Richmond Memorial Hall which is on a self-supporting basis.

Introductions of guests included: Mrs. Chandler, also Sam Ripley, Walter Johnson, Frank Tiller, Dr. Hinkley of the city council. Mrs. Chandler spoke for the city. Veterans introduced included: J. T. MacCormac, president of the Hall Directors; Commanders C. C. Kratzer, U.S.W.V.; C. O. Davis, V.F.W.; John B. Kinstrey, American Legion. J. E. Robbins. Chas W. W.St. John, Ralph Woods, Thomas Dunleavy — Congressional Medal of Honor man—; Dan M. Bradley. "Mother B" of Pinole was there.; Mrs. Pearl Outman, Legion Auxiliary chief, introduced the ladies who did the work and they took a well-deserved bow.

Music was provided by Dennis Shaw and His Veterans augmented by solos from the ever popular Elza Galbraith Calfee, lyric soprano, who sang "Sylvia" and "Serenade" and J. Ed Hill, tenor, who delighted with "Trumpeter." At the piano, Richmond's peerless accompanist, Emil Fsola.

Area Commander Louis Chess, American Legion, presented the compliments of the state department. C.C.

Commercial Organization Throws Weight Behind Santa Fe Trail Lines at Hearing Before State Railroad Commission

RICHMOND MAY BE BUS HDQS.

Forward Move in Transportation Approved By Entire City

In all sincerity we compliment the Richmond Chamber of Commerce for their splendid action of this week in endorsing the petition of the Santa Fe Trail Lines for their intra-state bus permits. As far as we know the people of Richmond, we feel sure this sentiment will be echoed throughout the city and the Chamber of Commerce has struck a responsive chord in its action.

The Santa Fe Railway has been a vital factor in the development of our city, and under the new era of transportation it will become an even more important part of the city's growth. There is a very strong possibility that our city may be made the headquarters for the Santa Fe Trail Lines System, and that WILL be something.

Prospects For Richmond

At any rate, we can feel that we have done what we could to help one of our very strongest taxpayers, future returns or no returns notwithstanding.

Editors and Railroads

As will be noticed from a reprinted editorial in this issue, San Bernardino's Evening Telegram voices the very same sentiment toward the Santa Fe in the southern city that we do here. Some of our friends in the Santa Fe have been wishing that our daily evening paper here would take the same tone as the San Bernardino Telegram. However, as to that, we can only echo a thought given to us by a friend: "When it comes to re-vamping—it is easier to re-vamp editors than transcontinental railroads!"

Carlson Heads Landon Campaign

In typical vigorous fashion Thomas M. Carlson, delegate on the Landon-for President republican ticket, has rolled up his sleeves to acquaint Republican voters with the facts at issue on the contest.

"The outstanding candidate today for the Republican nomination for president is Governor Alf. M. Landon of Kansas," says Carlson, "and as practically everybody is agreed on that fact, it would seem a natural thing to vote for the delegation that is pledged to him from the very start.

"The Landon delegation stands for something definite, while the other ticket is asking a voter to sign a blank check payable to the old line party bosses to be cashed at the natfonal convention in the interests of the delegation leaders . . . The uninstructed delegation defeats the purpose of the primary and hands over the control to certain interests who would use the franchise of the people for their personal political gains."

While, as is well known, the PROGRESS is a Democratic newspaper and as far as our personal vote is concerned we will never be able to do any Republican candidate any good, yet there is no harm in our giving our ideas of the Republican situation:

From a selfish standpoint,

"Hunger Marchers" Parade in the Capital

ABOUT six hundred men and women, members of the recently organized Unemployed Workers' Alliance, staged a big parade of "hunger marchers" in Washington, shouting demands, singing and waving banners. They sought to present a petition to President Roosevelt in the White House but the best they could do was to obtain an audience from Secretary Marvin McIntyre for a delegation headed by David Lasser, president of the alliance.

Vice Pres. Garner

Lasser declared after spending 30 minutes with the President's secretary: "Mr. McIntyre gave us a lot of nice words, but nothing substantial. If nothing is done to give these people jobs there will be a hunger march on Washington next summer in which hundreds of thousands will take part. We are tired of Mr. Roosevelt's promissory notes."

Lasser and his delegation also called on Vice President Garner at the Capitol and got even less satisfaction from him.

"The jobless feel that we have been sold out by the Democratic party," Lesser declared, in presenting his petition.

"I resent that," snapped the Vice President, reddening. "I have been in politics for 40 years and I don't think anybody has ever been sold out by the party."

The marchers carried banners and placards with such inscriptions as: "Give the bankers home relief; we want jobs!" "Slaves will not be killed," "We demand employment insurance," "Pass the Marcantonio bill," this being a 6 billion-dollar relief bill introduced by the New York city representative.

Labor Says Industry Is Arming for Conflict

BEFORE the senate subcommittee on labor appeared spokesmen for organized labor with charges that there is a great movement of machine guns, tear gas and police clubs into industrial centers for use in contending with strikes and attendant disorders. The first witness to tell the story of the arming of industrial plants for conflicts with labor was J. P. Harris, a steel worker from Portsmouth, Ohio. In support of his assertions came a mass of data compiled by the senate munitions investigating committee and presented at the hearing by Heber Blankenhorn, an employee of the national labor relations board.

At one point Harris testified that he knew the Wheeling Steel corporation at Portsmouth was "arming," a statement that brought from corporation officials at Portsmouth an assertion that company police were armed to protect property against "thieves and firebugs, and they will continue to be armed."

At another point in the hearing there was testimony that general "rumors" were being circulated that the Ford Motor company was "shot through" with spies, hired to report on the activities of labor.

Maryland Young Democrats Hear Mr. Roosevelt

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt, attended Easter services at St. Thomas Episcopal church, after the First Lady had witnessed the Knights Templar sunrise service at the Arlington amphitheater. Next day the President went to Baltimore where he addressed the Maryland Young Democratic clubs.

Mr. Roosevelt accepted an invitation to speak before the annual convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution which opens in Washington April 20. He also will deliver an address on April 25 at the Jefferson banquet of the National Democratic club in New York.

Hagood Given Command of Chicago Area

FOLLOWING a conference with Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood, who was removed from command of the Eighth corps area for criticizing WPA methods, President Roosevelt took the soldier back into his good graces and appointed him to the command of the Sixth corps area with headquarters in Chicago. He will replace Maj. Gen. Frank McCoy and the assignment takes effect May 2. General McCoy is transferred to the Second corps area at New York to succeed Maj. Gen. Dennis E. Nolan, who is retiring.

Death of James M. Beck Is Loss to Nation

SUDDEN death, due to a coronary thrombosis, came to James M. Beck at his residence in Washington, and all informed Americans mourn the demise of this public spirited citizen and eminent authority on constitutional law. Though he was a sturdy and conscientious opponent of the present national administration, leading officials in Washington united with the Republicans in declaring that in his death the nation had sustained a great loss.

J. M. Beck

Mr. Beck was not only one of the foremost lawyers of America but for more than three decades was a public man of distinction, holding numerous offices at Washington, and an influential place in the counsels of the Republican party. Born in Philadelphia in 1861, he first held office as United States attorney for the eastern district of Pennsylvania, as a Democrat. He left that party on the silver issue and was made an assistant attorney general by President McKinley. In 1921 Mr. Harding appointed him solicitor general, an office which he filled with distinction. He then served three terms in congress, where he was one of the best debaters, and retired in 1934 because he thought congress had become a "rubber stamp." Since then he had been prominent in the legal attacks on various phases of the New Deal.

Richard Yates, former governor of Illinois and former congressman, died in Springfield at the age of seventy-five years. The son of the Civil war governor of the state, Mr. Yates was for many years a picturesque figure in Illinois politics and an influential member of the Republican party.

Tangle of Diplomatic Rivalries in Europe

MUSSOLINI'S African adventure and Hitler's Rhineland doings and future intentions, tangled together, have created a situation that seemed to imperil the formal friendship between Great Britain and France. The British were insisting that Italy be curbed, that her use of poison gas in Ethiopia be taken up by the League of Nations and that peace negotiations between Italy and Ethiopia be opened quickly to forestall any attempt by Premier Mussolini to sign a settlement which might rise from ruins of Haile Selassie's Ethiopian empire. Foreign Secretary Eden indicated the British were determined to make peace progress "before we leave Geneva," Britain reserving its decision as to what to do next if this conciliation effort should fail.

The conciliation committee of the league was making little or no progress, and in Rome Mussolini told his cabinet that Ethiopia's armies should and would be "totally annihilated." His own forces, meanwhile, were moving rapidly toward Dessye and Addis Ababa.

France was reverting to her former policy of letting Italy go ahead with its African conquest, devoting her attention mainly to Germany and central Europe. The British continued to treat all that in a conciliatory way, which disgusted the French. Premier Sarraut handed in his government's reply to the Hitler settlement proposals, submitting in return its own plan. This demanded that Germany keep "hands off" the rest of Europe for 25 years, renouncing her apparent intentions of action against Austria, Danzig and Memel, and claims for colonies. It submitted a French peace plan based on "collective security" with regional mutual assistance pacts backed by an international army directed by a commission working through the league.

Spanish Parliament Ousts President Zamora

SOMETHING new in Spanish history took place in Madrid. The parliament, by a vote of 238 to 5, ousted Niceto Alcala Zamora from the office of president of the republic. This action, accomplished by a coalition of Socialists, Communists, Left Republicans and ten minor groups, was taken on a Socialist motion that the president had acted illegally in dissolving the last parliament before the elections and that therefore he should be expelled from office. Back of this motion, however, lay radical sentiment that Zamora, in using his power according to personal whim, has hampered the progress of the "republican revolution."

Diego Martinez Barrio, speaker of parliament, was made temporary president to serve until elections are held.

League of American Nations Proposed

IN THEIR formal acceptances of the invitations of the United States government to the forthcoming, inter-American peace conference, three of the Latin American nations have proposed that a league of American nations be formed to preserve peace in the western hemisphere. The suggestion comes from Presidents Alfonso Lopez of Colombia, Jorge Ubico of Guatemala and Rafael Trujillo of the Dominican Republic. They believe the proposed league would be not only a means of preventing war in the New World but also would be an effective adjunct to organizations working to preserve peace in all the world.

President Ubico proposed that such an agency be known as the Association of American Nations and that its members be pledged to mutual assistance in case of aggression against one of their number by a non-American power. He also suggested creation of a permanent court of inter-American justice, modeled after the World court at The Hague, for settlement of disputes within the Americas by arbitration.

Calles Is Expelled by Mexican Government

PLUTARCO ELIAS CALLES, former president of Mexico and for long the most powerful figure in that republic, was forcibly exiled to the United States, together with three other once prominent citizens, by the Mexican government, which declared their presence there was dangerous to the welfare of the country.

Summarily ousted with Calles, who for 11 years ruled Mexico with an iron hand, were Luis Morones, former minister of labor and leader of the regional confederation of workers and peasants; Luis de Leon, former minister of the interior and agriculture; and Rafael Melchor Ortega, former governor of Guanajuato.

The four men were, by order of President Cardenas, placed aboard a plane at Mexico City and taken across the border to Brownsville, Texas. From there they took another plane to California.

Leftists charged that Calles and his associates were fomenting agitation against the Cardenas administration. This Calles denied, adding: "A state of anarchy exists in Mexico and communism is spreading with government help."

Black's Lobby Committee Wins Court Decision

SENATOR BLACK'S lobby committee won a considerable victory in the District of Columbia Supreme court when Chief Justice Wheat refused to enjoin the committee from using the telegrams from and to William R. Hearst which had been seized. The judge held that the court had no jurisdiction over the committee, and said he could not see that the freedom of the press was in any way involved. Said his honor:

Senator Black

"I have not been informed yet of any case in which any court has assumed to dictate to a committee of the senate what it should do and what it should not do, and I do not feel that I have any right to inaugurate any such principle as that."

Elisha Hanson, counsel for Mr. Hearst, announced that he would appeal from the decision, and it was certain that the case would ultimately be taken before the United States Supreme court.

Continuing its investigation, the Black committee heard the testimony of Fred G. Clark of New York, national commander of the Crusaders. Mr. Clark denied that the organization had ever engaged in lobbying, and declared that it had assailed the methods of lobbyists in a national radio broadcast.

Senator Black endeavored to show that the Crusaders, the American Liberty league, the Sentinels of the Republic, the Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitution, the American Taxpayers' league, the National Economy league, and similar organizations opposed to the New Deal were supported largely by the same small group of wealthy industrialists. One of his investigators put in a list of contributors to two or more of the groups named. Mr. Clark obtained permission to include in the record a list of hundreds of small contributors, who sent in sums ranging from $1 up in response to the radio program.

Japanese Arrest Five Mongolian Officials

HEADQUARTERS of the Japanese army in Manchukuo announced that five Mongolian officials high in the service of the Manchukuan government had been arrested on the charge of being secret agents of Soviet Russia and would be court-martialed. One of them is Lin Sheng, governor of Northern Hsingan province.

It was asserted that the officials were accused of conniving with the Russian government and of supplying to Russia and Outer Mongolia military information which was used advantageously by both of Manchukuo's neighbors in recent frontier clashes.

Japanese army men alleged that Lin Sheng has been in contact with Russia since 1929. It was asserted that he received a promise that Russia would assist Mongolia in retaining its independence and that since then he had gathered secret information which he conveyed to the Russian consulate at Hailar.

Congressmen Working on Taxes and Relief

CONGRESS settled down to earnest work that would clear the way for early adjournment, the two chief matters under consideration being taxes and relief. Democratic members of the house ways and means committee worked in executive session to draw up the new revenue measure which they expect will yield about $799,000,000 in additional taxes during the next year. The minority members stayed away, scornfully asserting their presence was useless because the preparation of the measure was utterly partisan. Representative A. P. Lamneck of Ohio, Democrat, was insistent on his plan to raise $500,000,000 by a flat 20 to 22 per cent tax on corporation income. To produce $263,000,000 more and bring his plan nearly up to the money requirement outlined by President Roosevelt, Lamneck would repeal the present exemption of corporation dividends from the normal income tax rate. On that, he was in agreement with the committee program.

Harry L. Hopkins

Harry L. Hopkins, head of the WPA, appeared before a subcommittee of the house appropriations committee, also in executive session, to urge compliance with President Roosevelt's request for an additional billion and a half to finance relief in the 1937 fiscal year. Various committee members at once demanded that Mr. Hopkins tell what had been done with the $4,800,000,000 granted last year. He was said to have promised to do his best to satisfy them, but Chairman J. P. Buchanan warned the minority members that "this is not to be made into an investigation."

The committee extracted from Mr. Hopkins a reluctant promise that relief funds will not be spent hereafter on projects not approved by congress, these including especially the Florida ship canal and the Passamaquoddy tidal power experiment.

National Grange Opposes Mississippi Valley Bill

SENATOR NORRIS' bill creating a Mississippi Valley authority to apply the TVA experiment to 22 states is not approved by the National Grange, which thinks it would be absurd to bring new land into cultivation by irrigation while farmers are being paid for letting their land lie fallow. Fred H. Brenckman, legislative representative of the Grange, appeared before a senate agriculture subcommittee and said the organization also objected to the proposal to construct huge dams throughout the Mississippi valley for the production of hydro-electric power. He favored a scientific program of soil conservation but insisted upon a distinction between conservation and reclamation. He also advocated a scientific flood control program, but distinguished between flood control and hydro-electric power development.

Like previous witnesses, including electrical engineers and Morris Cooke, the New Deal's rural electrification administrator, Mr. Brenckman informed the committee that flood control can be accomplished only by constructing little dams up in the headwaters.

HOT WATER "ON TAP" Saves Time and Money...

IT ISN'T the mere striking of matches that makes the old-fashioned tank type of water heater such a nuisance. It is because someone always has to light the heater, wait for the water to heat and remember to turn off the heater again.

With an Automatic Water Heater all this is different. You turn on the hot water at the faucet. The first month of such water service is a revelation and you wonder how you ever put up with any other kind of hot water service.

Come in and learn how little it costs to have automatic hot water in your home. Prices begin at $52.50. Easy terms, of course.

MEMORIAL DINNER

represented the state department of the Spanish War Veterans.

Philip O. Solon, one of the ablest veterans of California delivered the speech of the evening, excerpts of which follow:

"About a dozen years ago the city of Richmond and Contra Costa County made the finest investment any city ever made when they erected this memorial to patriotism; and tonight all veterans. of whatever war, gather here to meet one's friends and make the gift alive, today as when it was built. What are these buildings for? A good time? No, a serious purpose—they are the heart of patriotism of the community. And the routine of patriotism must be taken over by somebody—it is burdensome, but a labor of love.

"Vigilance is the price of liberty. and we must be ever watchful to guard that liberty from the enemy within our gates."

The speaker gave instances wherein veterans had helped disabled veterans who would have been thrown on the ash-heap if it were not for organized veterans effort. He told of New York's Mayor La Guardia, a veteran; of the Pennsylvania veterans; of our own California veterans Home Loan. Most telling part of his speech was his admonition to veterans to be watchful lest the organizations be used by our own "worst enemies" to portray the vets, erroneously, as labor-baiters, whereas all vet organizations are pledged to strict neutrality on matters of "industrial strife."

Jacket Costumes Lead Style Parade

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

JACKET costume! A mere matter of two words and about the most important chapter in the story of the new spring and summer fashions is told. The consensus among style creators who know whereof they speak is that becomingness, femininity and individuality are the keynotes of women's fashions this season.

The new costume with its inevitable jacket (if not a cunningly devised cape) does just that. It flatters, it feminizes and being in a widely versatile mood, it tunes to type at the will of its ingenious designer. So it is that the colorful spring parade is mostly a matter of just one jacket costume after another.

Trekking along in the procession, boleros of Spanish extraction hobnob with jackets that have gone obviously Chinese. Hosts of smart Etons vary the program together with a goodly showing of stylish fingertip jackets. The new "baby reefer" and the just as new and important "baby swagger" are likewise keeping step to the spring song of fashion.

The new redingote, Eton and bolero costumes in navy or black, which are considered fashion "firsts" on the style program, form intriguing alliances with prints that pride themselves on their gay coloring. Jacket linings, sleeve facings, blouses and innumerable trimming details of bizarre print in contrast to monotones challenge designers to work out stunning effects.

Jackets of bright print or embroidery worn with gown or skirt in a solid color are outstanding. This is true not only of silk and woolen ensembles but swanky printed linens and colorful peasant-print cottons are especially attractive styles, according to this formula.

At a recent preview of foremost styles presented by the Chicago Wholesale Market district to an audience of fashion enthusiasts who had gathered from far and near to witness this significant event, the idea of the jacket costume was dramatically stressed for both daytime and evening dress. The jacketed models herewith illustrated were selected from this showing of surpassingly chic clothes as being not only practical but also flatteringly wearable.

The mode to the right features a swank bolero type. The brief jacket is lined, cuffed and collared with the same print that fashions the frilly blouse pictured with bolero removed in inset. The fine pleatings, the peplum tabs below the wide belt, the straight narrow silhouette of the skirt and especially the huge full-at-top sleeves are highly significant style details.

The perfectly stunning spectator-sports costume to the left eloquently bespeaks the "reason why" jacket ensembles are at the top o' the mode. A style so breathtaking as thtis will coax a burst of enthusiasm from even the most blase. The dress of voguish sheer white woolen is topped with a jacket of unique cut that is handsomely all-over braided with soutache. The original mode is bright navy but black on white is equally as effective. Which leads us to tell you that some of the smartest costumes going this season are white worked with black soutache or made up with effective touches of black-and-white print. Note the scroll soutache finishing the skirt hemline. It tells you that designful hemlines are a very important style gesture.

LAUGHTER IS NOT ENOUGH

A HUNTER college English professor says that our greatest need today is for a satirist to laugh away contemporary troubles.

"What the times need," we are told, "is an Addison or a Moliere before whose keen and ironic mockery, our futile follies will melt away like mist before a freshening wind."

The professor mentions two authors who are indeed famed for illuminating with the cold light of satire the weakness and follies of their time and country.

But he does not say that the satirists cured those faults of their time, or that the faults "melted away like mist" as he hoped today's follies would if held up to sufficient laughter.

There can be no doubt that a sense of humor is a saving grace at any time, and that above all, to be able to laugh at ourselves is the most promising signs. Laughter, even the laughter of mockery, will always help to put things in their place, to strengthen our sense of value.

In other words, laughter helps us to bear follies and faults.

But for the more constructive action of overcoming them, we need more. We need the understanding that is sometimes closer to tears than laughter. We need patience and—love.

BEDTIME STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

LIGHTFOOT DISCOVERS LOVE

WONDERFULLY handsome was Lightfoot the Deer as he stood in the little opening by the pond of Paddy the Beaver, his head thrown back proudly as he received the congratulations of his neighbors of the Green Forest who had seen him win the great fight with the big stranger who had come down from the Great Mountain. To beautiful Miss Daintyfoot, peeping out from a thicket where she had hidden to watch the great fight, Lightfoot was the most wonderful person in all the Great World. She adored him, which means that she loved him just as much as it was possible for her to love.

He Wondered If She Would Disappear and Run Away.

But Lightfoot didn't know this. In fact he didn't know that Miss Daintyfoot was there. His one thought had been to drive out of the Green Forest the big stranger who had come down from the Great Mountain. He had been jealous of that big stranger, though he hadn't known that he was jealous. The real cause of his anger and desire to fight had been fear that the big stranger would find Miss Daintyfoot and take her away. Of course this was nothing but jealousy.

Now that the great fight was over and he knew that the big stranger was hurrying back to the Great Mountain, all Lightfoot's anger melted away. In its place was a great longing, a longing to find Miss Daintyfoot. His great eyes became once more soft and beautiful. In them was a look of wistfulness. Lightfoot walked down to the edge of the water and drank, for he was very, very thirsty. Then he turned, intending to once more take up his search for beautiful Miss Daintyfoot.

When he turned he faced the thicket in which Miss Daintyfoot was hiding. His keen eyes caught a little movement of the branches. A beautiful head was slowly thrust out and Lightfoot gazed into a pair of soft eyes which he was sure were the most beautiful eyes in all the Great World.

He wondered if she would disappear and run away as she had the last time he saw her. He took a step or two forward. The beautiful head was withdrawn. Lightfoot's heart sank; then he bounded forward into the thicket. He more than half expected to find no one there, but when he entered that thicket he received the most wonderful surprise in all his life.

There stood Miss Daintyfoot, timid, bashful, but with a look in her eyes which Lightfoot could not mistake. In that instant Lightfoot understood the meaning of that longing which had kept him hunting for her, and of the rage which had filled him when he had discovered the presence of the big stranger from the Great Mountain. It was love. Lightfoot knew that he loved Miss Daintyfoot, and looking into her soft gentle eyes, he knew that Miss Daintyfoot loved him.

WHO ARE YOU?

The Romance of Your Name

By RUBY HASKINS ELLIS

A Clark?

LIKE so many of the early Anglo-Saxon names, the name of Clark or Clarke, originated from an occupation and in this instance the occupation was undoubtedly the office of a clerk. This office was considered a very superior one, as such a position required the services of one possessing great ability in reading and writing ancient medieval lore. Consequently, the Clarks were people of high intelligence and were looked upon with great admiration.

The Clarks in England, East Anglia particularly, were dwellers there before the Norman conquest.

Clarke

They were very religious and devout, and were active in building priories and abbeys in that part of the country. An interesting tradition of the family connects them by marriage with the descendants of Joseph of Arimathea.

Among the first immigrants to America, there were many of the name of Clark. The mate on board the Mayflower was a Clark. Thomas Clarke, of Plymouth, settled in 1623, and Capt. Daniel Clark, of Windsor, Conn., was a settler in 1639.

Tristam (or Thurston) Clark was born in Ipswich, England, county Suffolk, in 1594, came to America and settled at Plymouth, 1634. William Clark, a freeman at Watertown, Mass., in 1631, removed to Woburn before 1646.

Carew Clark was born in Bedfordshire, England, 1603, and came to Newport, R. I., in 1638. Arthur Clark was living in Boston in 1643.

O.R. Ludewig—BECAUSE of his kindness in giving a ride to a young fellow all the way from Burbank to Emeryville—462 miles—last Monday. It was only a happenstance that we knew of it, as we met the young man on the ferryboat to San Francisco, and learned the story from him. He had been working in the Warner Brothers Studio, and was on his way—without too much money to Salem, Oregon. This is what we like to see— friendly action—and if each of us can manage to do a good little deed like that once in a while the world will be better for it. Perhaps Mr. Ludewig was thinking of the time, years ago, when as a young man he worked his way West from Chicago in 28 days under pretty tough conditions—and he simply passed on to the young man some of the kindness he gathered along the way. Two surprises— one when we met the young man, a total stranger to us; the other when Mr. Ludewig reads this article.

REPUBLICAN DELEGATE

Democratically, we should be expected to favor the uninstructed delegation because it is pretty generally agreed that that outfit wants Hoover, or some fellow Old Guard of the same stripe; and that would make it easier for our good Preesident Roosevelt to lick such a candidate.

But, after all, we are all Americans first, whether we are Republican or Democrat in party, and we want to see the best man win. Personally, we would rather see old Senator Borah get the nomination—he would be the hardest to beat. But the uninstructed Delegation would just about as soon see Upton Sinclair nominated as the Idaho senator.

As between the two delegations on the ballot, the Landon bid is much the more progressive; and ,moreover, they have had sense enough to pick somebody around here to be a part of their delegation.

If we WERE voting Republican, we would vote the Landon ticket and send Tom to the Cleveland Convention to let them know Contra Costa County is on the map!

"Netting" Needle

The netting needle or shuttle was very common in the Eighteenth century, says Pathfinder Magazine. Women used the dainty tool in making a kind of narrow lace known as netting. When the craze first struck it was more or less a pastime, and an expensive one, for the netting needles were fancy and expensive. Later on needles became less elaborate and many women made all their own lace. We see few netting needles in operation today because few women know how to operate them.

It's Vacation Time So Let Guests Run the Column

Hugh Bradley is vacationing. And so, this week his shoes are filled by Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees, Chick Meehan, Manhattan college football coach and John G. Jackson, president of the United States Golf association.

By Col. Jacob Ruppert

I GUESS I was born with a couple of silver spoons in my mouth.

By that I mean that the man is twice lucky who can combine recreation with business the way I have been doing the last twenty-odd years since I bought the Yankees with Colonel Huston. And seven years later I owned the club all by myself. I never regretted either transaction.

I would do it all over again gladly. Every day I like baseball better. The game has its headaches—but its thrills, too. And what business doesn't have a headache? The winning hit in the ninth inning with the bases full leaves me as limp as a kid—and just owning a ball club has its kick, too.

Just now I've discovered a new one in the chain store system. I didn't believe in the Branch Rickey idea at first; then I realized that it was the fairest system to the ball player. Tying a string to a young player and sending him out on option doesn't give him a fair chance to make the most of his ability.

Col. Ruppert

Now there are seven cities in the Yankee chain. We're developing our own players—Joe DiMaggio will probably be our last big purchase.

I like to sit back in my grandstand seat and watch the youngsters fight their way up through the different classifications to their big moment—opening day at the Yankee stadium.

No psychologist could ask for a better opportunity to study character. It's a study of temperament and actions. It's mighty interesting to see how the boy reacts to his opening. Some of them keep hustling all the time. Others let well enough alone.

The hardest thing is to change a lazy youngster into a hustler of the Ty Cobb type. It's really seldom done. Ball playing is a natural gift like being an actor, a lawyer or a great singer. There is always the man who steps to the front.

My first love was horse racing but it doesn't wear as well as base ball. The thrill in a horse race lasts only a couple of minutes. A ball game lasts two hours.

We have found, in the past, that golf attendance is ruled more by the caliber of the competition than by the location of the tournament. As the outstanding example of that principle, I can best refer to the case of Bobby Jones. When Bobby was in his prime he could jam the galleries and make the marshals' work a nightmare no matter where he was playing.

The average golfer probably does not realize just how much tournament receipts mean to golf and the United States Golf association. In proof I offer figures from a recent report of the executive committee, which show that over a period of nine years a net disbursement of 98 per cent of the dues paid by member clubs was devoted to the work of the greens section.

Good Boxing at Madison Square

By Frankie Neil

Former World's Champion Of The Bantamweights

Referee was One Round Hogan—same judges as usual—George Shaw, Charlie Schwake, Frank Canning. George Brooks, timekeeper. All of the bouts were good, and decisions were generally fair.

• • ✦ • •

First go was a slam-bang affairbetween Don Raybuck, of Hayward, and Manza Woody, 163, from El Cerrito. Raybuck won by a technical KO in the 4th round. Was give and take all the way. Woody got knocked down twice and then on the third trip to the canvas he stayed right there.

• • ✦ • •

Next bout—two little peanuts, bantams — Johnny Melim, Oakland, and Tommy Quinones, S. F. Was a good bout. Both very fast.

• • ✦ • •

Third set-to was between two bantams— Hocker of Oakland and O'Shea of El Cerrito. It was stopped in the first round because Hocker got a socker in the eye. It opened up quite a cut. They had to stop it.

• • ✦ • •

Fourth frame was FreddieCamacho, 128, Oakland, and Frank Gonsalves, Oakland, 122. Comacho was able to knock Gonsalves down as the bell sounded in the first round. He repeated the dose in the second stanza and Gonsalves stayed there.

• • ✦ • •

Fifth Bout—Middleweight Johnnie Mattero, S. F., 160, & Oakland Walt Remus, 160. Remus started out like a champion. Then he got slammed a couple of times & that slowed him up some. In the next round Remus got a lot better and took many a one on the button inthat 2d round. Next round, both of them started taking them. In the fourth, Remus came back and won the decision.

• • ✦ • •

Sixth go—Pete Robles, 134, Otkland, and Ray Valdez, 132, S. F. Robles was too smart and KOed Valdez in the 3d round after a good, fair bout.

Lightweight Al Eridia, of the Oakland Moose Club and Wally Hainey mixed it for a good bout. Good draw. Good decision.

MAIN EVENT — Paul Jones & George Carmelle, featherweights. A very good bout. Cermelle got a cut over his eye that bothered him considerably in the first round His seconds fied it up for him, and he boxed through to the finish, winning a draw. Myself, I would have given him the edge.

They gave away 20 boxes of candy to the seat-holders, and, by the way, it seemed as if every seat holder was a lady last night.

Quite a difficult time to find out who to give the prizes for the best bout of the evening. Remus and Mattero finally won the nod. Two golden boxing gloves emblems. The Mayor of Berkeley, Mr. Ament, gave out the prizes. Close count—Woody and Raybuck being the runners-up.

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne.

SANTA FE PLANS

WESTERN railroads won a notable victory recently when the Interstate Commerce Commission ruled eastern transportation systems must reduce their passenger fares. The western lines had some time ago learned the lesson that lower fares mean increased custom and therefore more profits or, more properly speaking, hearer approach to profits. The East had not learned it and the result was the efforts of the western roads were abortive on the other side of the Mississippi.

Among the great transportation systems that have been leading the way with lower fares, better service for the public and a better break for the stockholders has been the Santa Fe. That railroad was one of the pioneers with lower fares, and it must be a source of satisfaction to its management to have its judgment confirmed, after exhaustive investigation by the Inter-State Commerce Commission.

Having proven the excellence of its judgment with reference to cheaper transportation and an increased volume of business, the Santa Fe management is entitled to public respect to its judgment when it offers lower fares in California in return for an intrastate franchise to operate comfortable, commodious busses it is already using in interstate transportation.

The showing being made by the Santa Fe at its hearing before members of the railroad commission is sufficient to convince the impartial observers it will be a direct benefit to various sections of the state if permission to use the busses for local travel is granted.

The only argument which can be advanced against the franchise is that transportation needs are aleady supplied, which we of this section know is not the case. What the Santa Fe offers the desert communities of our own county with reference to the county seat is something we have not hitherto had and which no other agency to date has offered to supply.

The other argument that these busses will add to the hazards of travel on the highways need have no bearing on the situation. As a matter of fact, Santa Fe busses are operating along California highways in interstate business and there will be no addition to existing dangers if the local franchise is granted.

San Bernardino's prosperity is so intimately connected with that of this great railroad system our own interests demand it shall be granted what its competitors have long enjoyed.

What is good business for the Santa Fe is good business for San Bernardino.

San Bernardino EVENING TELEGRAM

A PECULIAR SUNSET

When I was a young man just beginning to take an interest in things political there was a great Democratic leader in the Congress from the State of Ohio. He was Samuel S. Cox and became known as "Sunset" Cox, due to an article which appeared in the "Ohio Statesman" on May 19, 1853 entitled "A Great Old Sunset." He was in the composing room of the "Statesman" one evening and witnessed a peculiarly beautiful sunset. As the inspiration seized him, he picked up his pencil and using an imposing stone for a desk, he hurriedly wrote the following lines.

What a peculiar sunset was that of last night! How glorious the storm and how splendid the setting of the sun! We do not remember ever to have seen the like on our round globe. The scene opened in the West, with a whole horizon full of golden, impenetrating luster which colored the foliage and brightened every object from its own rich dyes. The myriad colors grew deeper and deeper and richer until the golden luster was transfused into a storm cloud full of finest lightning which leaped in dazzling zig-zag, all over and around the city. The wind arose with its fury; the slender shrubs and giant trees made obeisance to its majesty. Some even snapped before its force. The strawberry beds and grass plats turned up their whites to see Zephyrus march by. As the rain hurried away, thunder roared out grandly and the fire bells caught the excitement and rang in hearty chorus. The south and east received the copious showers and the west all at once brightened up in a long, polished belt of azure, worthy of a Sicilian sky. Presently a cloud appeared in the azure belt in the form of a castellated city. It became more vivid, revealing strange forms of peerless fanes and alabastered temples and glories rare and grand in this mundane sphere. It reminded us of Wadworth's splendid verse in his "Excursion:"

"The appearance instantly disclosed Was of a mighty city, boldly say A wilderness of buildings, sinking far And self withdrawn into wondrous depth. Far sinking into splendor without end."

But the city vanished only to give place to another isle, where the most beautiful forms of foliage appeared imaging a paradise in the distant and purified air. The sun wearied of the elemental commotion sank slowly behind the green planes of the west. The Great Eye of Heaven, however, went not down without a dark brow hanging over the departing light. The rich flush of unearthly light had passed and the rain had ceased: when the solemn church bells pealed and the laughter of children rang out, and joyous after the storm is heard the carol of birds."

A BOUQUET FOR JIM

J. E. Christensen received a well deserved appointment from the Contra Costa County board if supervisors at their meeting yesterday when he was appointed judge at San Pablo. Supervisor Long of Richmond in whose district the vacancy occurred, proposed the name and appointment was passed without a dissent.

The new judge is an ardent labor leader now serving as vice president of the Contra Costa labor council. Occasionally men are elected to office who are not controlled by the chamber of comics or a political boss Had Supervisor Long been under the control of big business he would not dare appoint a labor leader to a responsible position. A man with the courage of his convictions is to be admired in this day and age.

We congratulate the supervisor on his selection and we predict for the new judge a successful term of office as a fair and impartial judge who we know will hold his oath sacred.

HEROES OF AMERICAN HISTORY

Longfellow, the son of a lawyer, was born in Portland, Maine. He studied in Europe and became a marvelous linguist. At 22 he was already a professor of languages and translated poems from nearly all the foreign tongues. For years Longfellow taught at Harvard. His smooth, happy existence was interrupted only once by a great tragedy, when his wife died in a fire. Longfellow was a gentle, dignified man and loved children. That is why his beautiful legends of "Evangeline," "Hiawatha" and "The Courtship of Miles Standish" are beloved by young and old.

About the Postmasters "Union"

Editor Progress:

Well, somebody said that you can take the hick out of the country, etc., and it's the same way with postmasters. Now, nobody has found any scheme to keep postmasters from getting their heads together—this problem has worried Postmaster General after Postmaster General. Of the thousand and one things that Postmasters should not do: putting their heads together stands at the very apex however, it should be encouraged by their opponents, as it is the surest known wty of riding to a fall. Therefore, we will probably read oftener of Postmasters getting their heads together with the ultimate result of losing them. No politician is under the guns like a postmaster, everybody big and little is a-sniping and cutting in on him, so this groping and massing together idea presents the largest political target known to man, the greatest and most dangerous exposure to political fire. But I suppose there is no help for this—as Mark Twain once said "For ways that are Dark and Tricks that are Vain"—

Compliments to a Legal Newspaper

To the Editor, Sir:

Well I see where the "Point Richond Progress" is declared a LEGAL paper. I am glad to hear the editor ain't no Outlaw any more. I think everybody should reform in their Old Age; so now I hope you'll print sumpin' somebody will read, I mean the Democrats. You see your paper is also subscribed to by Republicans (Warren) who want to know what's going on, etc.,—Maybe some of them who have been high-hatting Point Richmond might now come in and put their feet on the new rug and spit tobacco juice on the new cuspidor—so heres hopin' your Door Mat was telling the truth when it said: "Welcome."

Old Drummer On Transportation

Editor Progress:

Well I see where the Sons of Adam are still troubled with the transportation problem: It started in the Garden of Eden when Adam got a Notice from the Landlord for him and his Ball and Chain to pack up the fig-leaves and toothbrush and start down the canyon talking to theirselves. Well, ever since that time the run-of-the-mill, or Horny Handed Sons of Toil, have had very little to say on the matter: Rights of the Way: Franchises, etc., have been secured by Subtile Laws conceived and brought forth by Eminent Attorneys, and the Public Has Been Taken for a Ride? But retribution finally catches up with the fastest trains and we now see the R Rs in humble supplication admitting their past errors and begging our indulgence; and if the lesson is well learned, WE should not be arrogant for we can easily jump out of the frying pan into the fire. For my part I hope good, clean, safe railroad coaches don't go out of fashion but if we must have busses I hope they are run by responsible corporations!
